The Robber of the Name

"If I do, I know that they are very kind ones," she said, gently. "But, indeed, it was not my history to ask you to tell me your history, which I cannot tell you mine."

"You shall know—and see how I trust you, Paul," said "Mabel." "Mabel is not my right name, but I cannot tell you. You must trust me, when I say that I have done nothing wrong, though you found me alone in London and friends."

He raised his pale face to hers with a piteous outcry. "Don't, don't," he murmured. "As if I could think that you had done anything wrong! And I don't want to know anything, Mabel! Oh, don't cry!" he pleaded, for the tears were filling her eyes.

"No," she answered, wiping them away. "I won't cry, Paul. Let us talk about something else than myself, and so you are a third violin at a theatre?"

"Yes. At the Lyric. Do you know it? But of course you do."

She remembered the theatre. It had been opened by a manager—another manager—to believe that English men and women could be found sufficiently large to perform in the English opera. She had gone there once with her father, who remained silent to the last question.

"It is not a very grand theatre—not like the Italian opera, but it is comfortable. But the manager is very kind and liberal. How much do you think they pay the boys?"

She shook her head. "Twenty-five shillings a week," she said, with an air of triumph. "Isn't it a large salary? Oh, it is the greatest of my fortune that I got the place," he went on. "After father died I got very poor; so poor that I thought I should have to go to the workhouse. But I was not so poor, as you think, and I am so little and crippled, and I could get a few pennies, and I was able to live on my own."

"You heart ceased to throb and the consoling influence of the music took possession of her. In a minute or two her hands dropped from her face, and she sat up and watched him. It seemed that he had forgotten her but suddenly he played a final chord and turned to regard her anxiously.

"Are you better, Mabel?" he murmured. "Yes, yes," she said. "It was cruel to cry over your music; but Paul, you play like an angel! What was it you were playing?"

He hung his head, and his face flushed. "You don't know," he said, recalling the exquisite melody which he had played and the music time tortured and delighted her.

"You composed it?" said Iris, opened eyes. "No," he said, meekly. "Iris was silent for a moment; then she leaned forward and said, impulsively: "Paul, do you know that you are a very great musician?"

He looked down at his busy stunted fingers, and smiled ruefully. "No, I am not a very great one. Miss Mabel!"

"No, no!" she repeated, emphatically. "I know something—only a little—of music, but I know enough to know that you are a genius, Paul!"

LIBERAL WORK BEARS FRUIT

Long Fight for Campaign Funds Publicity Won.

HYDRO-RADIALS

Rowell Twits Cabinet on Coolness to Policy.

Toronto, April 24.—Three years of effort on the part of the Opposition to secure publicity of campaign contributions and the prohibition of contributions from Government contractors, corporations and liquor license holders has been rewarded. The Legal Committee, after a number of attempts to get together, finally accepted the principle of these two measures yesterday, and reported the bills to the House. Two bills each, from the Opposition and the Government were considered, and the Government measures will come back to the House for final enactment into law.

It was decided that every corporation and every director, manager or officer of a corporation, every licensee, every member of a liquor association which and every public contract with the government or indirectly pays or contributes any sum of money or its equivalent in order to aid or promote or prevent the nomination of any person to the Assembly or to any public office, or in order to aid, hinder or prevent the election of any person, or to influence or affect the vote of the electors of the Province upon any question submitted to them, shall incur a penalty equal to the amount of the subscription and contribution, or $100, whichever is greater, to impose the same penalty on the recipient as on the donor. In the case of a person, who aids or assists, the penalty was set at not less than $50 nor more than $250.

In the course of the discussion which took place, Mr. Rowell said he thought the law for corporations should be a general one.

Mr. Howard Ferguson: "What penalties would you suggest? Make it a good one."

Mr. Rowell: "A penalty equal to the amount of the contribution and the minimum penalty was placed at $100."

Mr. Rowell: "One hundred dollars is a mere bagatelle."

IMPORT OF LUMBER

Some Startling Figures From Industrial Canada.

Statistics show that Canadian manufacturers are importing large quantities of lumber from foreign countries. Some of this wood is not grown in Canada, but much of it is. Canada has great forests of birch, which cannot be marketed because it is too heavy to float down rivers and no railways are within hauling distance. Consequently, birch is imported. In the St. John and Tobique Valleys of New Brunswick there is an area of 10,000 square miles of forest and private land on which is a massive maple, elm, birch, ash, butternut and poplar has not been cut to any extent. Yet last year, Ontario manufacturers alone paid about $5,000,000 for imported wood.

The extent to which Ontario manufacturers imported wood from foreign countries last year is shown by the following statistics compiled by the Forestry Department: Oak, 36 per cent; maple, 29 per cent; spruce, 25 per cent; pine, 33 per cent; elm, 35 per cent; ash, 78 per cent; elm, 24 per cent; and birch, 56 per cent of the total amount used.

Manufacturers should discover why they need a large quantity of lumber which they use in Canada, and why they cannot be put upon the Canadian market at prices lower than those secured for similar woods shipped to the country. Now that the Canadian railways are completed, transportation companies should consider tapping forests with which they are familiar. But Canadian timber may be used by Canadian manufacturers.

COMPENSATION BILL IS READY

Slight Alterations Made Before Third Reading.

ELECTION LAWS

Hearst's Bill to Amend Them Reported.

Toronto, April 24.—The Workmen's Compensation Act, which was passed by the Legislature yesterday, the new clause which had been introduced relating to the computing of average earnings was struck out. It is understood that this clause was objectionable to the labor interests. The clause which was eliminated reads: "Where a workman has been employed for the twelve months preceding his accident by the same employer his average weekly earnings shall be computed by dividing the total sum earned by him in such period by fifty-two, and where to have been employed for a less period the estimate shall be made as nearly as possible to what would probably have been earned in such period by fifty-two. (A few minor alterations were also made, and the bill was reported and will come up for third reading to-day."

Mr. Rowell, making some reference to the bill, pointed out how extremely valuable it was to the standstill of the employer and the employee to have adequate provision for a long period of time. He said that the bill would be a valuable one, and he submitted it would have been who had the Provincial Treasurer made some amendments to the bill, and he would be glad to make suitable provision. He also alluded to the continuation of the bill of the day, and he said that it would be simpler in the working out of the bill, and he would be glad to make suitable provision. PROSPEROUS YEAR

Says Hamiltonian Secretary of Fraternal Association.

Toronto, April 24.—Delegates to the twenty-third annual meeting of the Hamiltonian Association, representing over 400,000 members, were publicly welcomed to the city yesterday by Controller McCarthy, on behalf of the city of Hamilton, at the Temple Hotel, at the Temple Hotel.

The objects of the association are fraternal and businesslike, the latter meaning the keeping of a watchful eye on the business interests of the Legislatures of the various provinces and before the Dominion Parliament. The association is a non-political one, and its object is to secure that nothing detrimental to the societies should pass into law.

President John H. Bell, in his opening address, pointed with pleasure to the fact that the past year had been one of increased prosperity, yet, he said, there seemed to be growing a spirit of discontent, and he alluded to the question of registration would assume an entirely different character, and he would be glad to make suitable provision. He also alluded to the continuation of the bill of the day, and he said that it would be simpler in the working out of the bill, and he would be glad to make suitable provision.

PACIFIC G. E. R.

Good Progress on Western Canada's Latest Railway.

Progress on the construction of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, which is to link Vancouver and the Grand Trunk Pacific main line, is rapid. Work is being pushed forward as quickly as circumstances will allow, and grading and bridge building are finding employment for a large force of men.

Part of the first installment of rolling stock ordered a short time ago by the Pacific Great Eastern Railway has arrived at the coast. Fifty box cars and one hundred flat cars were purchased by the company. Ten of the former and thirty of the latter are due to arrive early in June, as well as a second consignment of freight cars. The engineers who are conducting a reconnaissance of the proposed route north of Prince George to the Peace River Country are still in the field, but are understood to have nearly completed their preliminary observations. On their return to Prince George parties of local engineers will start and make the course of the proposed extension.

ARMY ENROUTE TO VERA CRUZ

Infantry Ordered From Galveston to Aid Navy.

TROOPS TO BORDER

Wilson Will Wait For Huerta's Action.

Washington, April 23.—Three important developments today brought the Mexican situation into sharp focus. A brigade of infantry at Galveston was ordered to leave immediately for Vera Cruz to reinforce the navy. Additional troops were ordered to Texas for service on the border. Orders were issued from the War Department restoring the embargo on all shipments of arms across the Mexican frontier.

The troops' movements are the first ordered in the present Mexican crisis. They are merely the forerunners of other movements which will follow in quick succession. Within the next few days more troops will undoubtedly be following the 4,500 infantrymen now ordered to Vera Cruz and Major-General Huerta's army will be designated to lead the army campaign in Mexico, probably will be on his way to the front.

While this movement of troops is being ordered, the President has called the forces already thrown against Huerta, the other orders which went forth to the members of the Senate to relate more immediately to Carranza and the Constitutionals. The removal of the movement of new troops into Texas is designed directly to protect Americans against outbreaks.

Very indicative now points to the fact that the President has called the volunteers. There were taken to-day by the President to hurry action on the part of the Senate. The President in Congress, and information was conveyed to members of the Senate that the President had called the volunteers.
